

Violet McNally
Art10F
Photo Walk
April 11th, 2023

Reflection

I found this to be a very fun assignment. I bounced around with a couple ideas for my walk but ultimately decided on the egg. My Fridge is filled with eggs because of my 5 roommates who eat an egg a day. It has become ingrained in their routine. Many people practice making themselves an egg every day for breakfast, the start to their day. I wanted to take the audience on a metaphorical walk, a journey. Something they may do everyday, without really thinking about it. Capturing the mundane, the simple. I enjoyed thinking about how I wanted this to be shot. I wanted the pan to be centered almost always, allowing for natural movement. I wanted it to be shot as if I were looking down on my egg as I cooked it. I remained pretty stagnant throughout. I worry that no emotion will come through, and my work will appear too disconnected from the subject. Regardless I think truthful moments came through, such as the shell falling into the pan as the hands retrieves it. Things that seem to happen to us all. When thinking of it in terms of a story, it excites me. As I continue to work with this piece I am sure I'll get sick of eggs, as many people do when they eat them every morning. I'll fall into a routine the same way we all do. Demonstrating the loopy loop that is time.

<https://docs.google.com/presentation/d/1-nix7FPpLaqQFogoHmEAkJmlmCGfwbEMtYg1BWohCc/edit?usp=sharing>

Self Evaluation Rubric

Discord

Introduction

violet mcnally 🌿 Today at 6:10 PM

Hi there!! I'm Violet (vi) I use any pronouns and I'm a second-year art major. Last quarter I took Art80T, so I have some knowledge about the various Adobe softwares like Photoshop, Animate, After Effects and Illustrator. Mostly I paint, and sketch. I love to mix different mediums into one piece. I am very excited to learn more about time-based art! (ᵔ՞ᵔ)

Photo walk:
Sunny side up

